

Diane Ernst is the new She's in Power Program Manager. She is an alumni of Colorado State University's Human Development and Family Studies program and has been working towards engaging youth in environmental issues for over 10 years. She started an environmental stewardship club for teenagers in Northern Colorado to help bridge a gap in opportunities for youth to be engaged in local sustainability initiatives. This club focuses on leadership, mentorship and hands on projects to give youth the tools they need to successfully engage in climate action. Diane is also involved in the Natural Leaders Network which supports the leadership development of youth and young adults through mentorship to create positive change around the world. Diane is passionate about equity and inclusion and is eager to collaborate and bring new perspectives to the She's in Power program in 2021 and beyond.
